

Coro Southern California

ANNUAL IMPACT REPORT
2022-23

A MESSAGE FROM

Coro's President & CEO and Coro's Board Chair

Since its founding, Coro training has focused on the art of collaboration – alliances of individuals and organizations from the nonprofit, government, labor, philanthropic, and business sectors bringing their diverse perspectives and resources to jointly solve social, economic, and political challenges, and achieve shared goals.

Our democracy continues to be threatened and we continue to confront challenges of unparalleled complexity. With this complexity, the indispensable ingredient of effective, adaptive leadership is all the more essential. More than ever, we need leaders who ask effective questions, explore innovative solutions, reach across silos and traditional boundaries to build unlikely coalitions, and pursue cross-boundary collaborations.

We have been innovating new ways to empower and serve leaders who are committed to solving our region's enormous public challenges, including housing and houselessness, workforce development, and the environment. This year, we will launch our newest program, the Climate Resilience Leadership Network \(CRLN\). CRLN fosters robust leadership development in an experiential cohort-based program designed to awaken, build, and grow stewards needed to create and nurture healthier and more resilient communities in the Los Angeles region.

As we navigate the unknowns of today, Coro remains committed to supporting Southern California's leadership community in service of the greater good. We continue to help leaders roll up their sleeves, ask tough questions, and further the ever-evolving, always challenging work of democracy-building. In response to our region's challenges, we doubled down and brought Coro training to more leaders, serving over 1,000 leaders through our leadership programs, workshops, collaboratives, and labs.

We are inspired by cohorts of Coro participants who are ready to develop connections and skills to strengthen communities, organizations, and our democracy, and excited for the new members of our Coro family to forge connections, establish common ground, and create transformational impact.

Thank you for your investment in our democracy, in future leaders, and in Coro's mission of building a civic leadership infrastructure for the health, vitality, and equity of our region and world. There are so many unknowns right now, but what we know for certain is that as a community, we have the tools and the resilience to weather these unknowns together.

With gratitude,

Natalie Samarjian

Deepening Our Commitment to Equity and Racial Justice

Here at Coro, we believe that in order for a democracy to work effectively for its citizens, it needs to work for everyone. This year, we deepened our commitment to Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Belonging (DEIB) across programs, teams, and at the governance level by:

Using an inclusive lens as a foundation for our organizational culture and ensuring that diversity, equity, inclusion and belonging are embedded into Coro holistically.

Working to ensure our programs — from recruitment to delivery — are informed by a DEIB framework.

Continuing to build and connect a diverse community of leaders through programs and events.

Fellows Program in Public Affairs

The Fellows Program in Public Affairs is a nine-month, full-time civic leadership development incubator for nationally selected college graduates. Using the city as a classroom, Coro Fellows learn through projects, placements, interviews, and issue deep dives with private, public, and nonprofit decision-makers. They work as a group to develop and deepen critical thinking, analytical, governance, and leadership skills. Fellows graduate to join an international community of engaged alumni and leave the program with a profound understanding of how Southern California works, and the knowledge, skills, and networks to make it better.

"Coro gave me a job in Los Angeles where I get to help people and use my time to make LA better. But more than that it gave me an expansive community of friends, mentors, allies, and coworkers that I couldn't have gotten any other way. It taught me how to understand LA a lot better and who to go to to ask important questions or hear different perspectives. It gave me the confidence to create the network I did, to believe in myself, and to continue to meet new people and do great work. It truly changed my life and kick-started my career."

"I learned that I have a capacity to learn completely new ideas/concepts very quickly. I started with hardly any knowledge of public affairs in the Southern California region when I started Coro. Now, I am confidently applying everything I learned, in only nine months, to my job in a way that even surprises me sometimes."

Fellows Program Alum, 2023

"The Fellows Program opened my eyes to the ways in which structures that are seemingly separate are all deeply interrelated. It helped me grow as an individual, a leader, and a teammate to recognize levers of power and create solutions."

Youth Fellows Program

The Youth Fellows Program (YFP) is a transformative full-time, six-week summer program that prepares high school students between the ages of 15 to 17 to become active citizens who assume leadership roles in their schools and communities. This program is designed to foster the next generation of Southern California leaders, educating them not only about public life and institutions, but also how to become more effective advocates and ambassadors for their communities.

"The Coro Youth Fellows Program was especially good at allowing the Youth Fellows the space to lead ourselves and drive the direction of our learning and growth...this program did a great job of introducing tools that would be beneficial in contexts outside of Coro, as well as allowed each fellow to be themselves."

Lead LA

Lead LA is designed for emerging and established change-makers in the region eager to expand their leadership capacity for impact. Lead LA is a nine-month, part-time program designed for a cross-sector cohort of mid-career professionals with a desire to grow their knowledge and network in Los Angeles. Participants gain the leadership skills necessary to effectively lead teams towards achieving large, complex goals, and represent diverse communities and sectors across Los Angeles County.

"It has given me a solid framework from which to approach challenges and people. It also exposed me to people and issues that I otherwise probably would never have been in my usual professional and personal circles. It has also impressed upon me that asking good questions is more important than having half hearted answers, how important communities' histories are to being a good civic participant and community member, and how to appropriately engage with adaptive challenges."

Housing & Houselessness Leadership Network

The Housing and Houselessness Leadership Network (HHLN) provides houselessness service providers and housing professionals with the leadership skills and a cross-sector network to advance their capacity to ignite action and impact within their organizations and across the region. This part-time program supports participants to strengthen their knowledge of housing challenges and solutions in the greater Los Angeles area through peer-based experiential learning and from regional housing and homelessness leaders effectuating meaningful change.

"I valued being given a space to engage myself as a diverse leader and not just a single note representative of an organization or societal problem. I felt pushed to explore myself and I value the deep relationships I fostered. I feel like I walked out with a family and a coalition that can innovate and change the future of homelessness. In no unclear words Los Angeles needed this leadership space to have difficult conversations and the innovations that can possibly come out of our personal commitments to purpose and change. I will accept the challenge to be an adaptive and vulnerable leader because the people and cohort relationships will be invaluable to the rest of my life. I met what I hope are my new best friends and freedom fighters for transformational sector change. We can change this challenge by breaking down the walls and seeing the people and transformative leaders in front of us. I love you Coro for what you opened in my heart."

Women in Leadership

Women in Leadership (WIL) seeks to advance women’s professional, personal, and political capacity to tackle society’s challenges together and contribute to a thriving democracy. WIL advances the leadership development of mid-career women professionals from the private, nonprofit, and public sectors, establishing a pipeline for professional advancement, and building a cross-sector network of women who support each other’s leadership development. Coro serves two WIL cohorts annually, in the Spring and Fall. Participants engage in intensive leadership skill-building seminars, expansive network building, and deepen their capacity to effect positive change at work and in the community. WIL serves women-identifying and non-binary leaders.

“Participating in WIL has taught me so much about myself, and helped me to value my own unique perspective on the world and leverage it to become a more effective leader. The confidence and self-awareness I have gained through this process is absolutely invaluable to me, and has already improved my relationships at work and home.”

Workforce Leadership Network

The Workforce Leadership Network (WLN) aims to develop a resilient network of leaders who can communicate effectively across organizations, seize opportunities for bold action and collaborations, and foster relationships and mutual understanding among varied stakeholders. WLN brings together a cohort of direct service providers, systems operators, and thought leaders across the field of workforce development for a part-time leadership development incubator. The program leverages Coro's proven leadership training curriculum and human-centered design to give workforce professionals the skills they need to enhance their leadership capacity to more equitably increase positive outcomes for job seekers and precariously employed people.

"The WLN program did a great job in not only showing us material but leading us to see how we can put into practice these ideas and systems. I appreciate all the people that were in the space and the different levels of expertise they brought in. As someone who usually feels excluded I felt included by folks no matter where I was sitting or whoever I was paired up with."

Building Our Community

In 2022-23 Coro was thrilled to unite the Coro family to do what we do best, connect, collaborate and celebrate:

In April, 2023 we hosted our Annual Women in Leadership Luncheon, bringing together over 300 Southern California civic leaders and advocates for women’s leadership to celebrate women in leadership, learn about the array of personal and professional issues facing women, opportunities to amplify women's leaders, and to connect and collaborate with one another.

In October, 2023, we hosted our Annual Crystal Eagle Awards Gala, bringing together over 500 members of Southern California's civic leadership community to recognize and honor visionary leaders whose contributions have created a transformative impact in Southern California and beyond.

In December, 2022, we hosted our Annual Holiday Gathering, bringing together Coro alumni and supporters to connect and celebrate the holiday season.

Coro X helps organizations and institutions build a collaborative culture and develop effective leadership. Through customized training tailored to our partners’ needs — from shorter retreat-style training and workshops to longer-format cohort-based programming — Coro X allows us to deliver Coro training to organizations and strengthen civic institutions.
